USP Website Redesign Project

Project Overview (18 months timeframe—comprises multiple phases)

- Phase I – Research
  - Surveyed internal and external stakeholders (random cross section of 1000 stakeholders from various focus areas, work sectors, regions of world, and levels of experience)
  - Online and in-person stakeholder and staff web organization exercises
  - Alignment with new branding
  - Web/technology best practices (third-party assessment of site, organizational needs and goals)

- Phase II – Development
  - Wireframe/architecture
  - Design templates

- Phase III – Implementation/Launch
  - Integration of USP technology – microsites, applications, functionality, backend management tools
  - Content migration (USP.org, USNNF and FCC microsites)
  - Launch in coordination with new USP brand
Key Changes

Moved compendial updates to a dedicated USP-NF site

- Goal - move updates to uncluttered online environment only for USP-NF content
  - Less toggling back and forth between USP.org and the USP-NF Online product site

- Part of larger publication initiative—launch of the next generation of the USP-NF Online
  - Soon there will be a more seamless environment for USP-NF with integrated compendial and product updates.

Overhauled content on USP.org

- New face of the organization’s brand and impact of work
- Organized by user focus rather than compendia
- Purged archive of old information to improve search and timeliness
Accessing the New USP-NF Microsite

There are multiple ways to access the new USP-NF microsite.  From direct links:

Content on the New USP-NF Microsite

When you click on any of those links, they will take you to the new USP-NF microsite. All of the content in this new environment was migrated from the old “USP-NF” section on the former usp.org website.
Advancing quality to help build a healthier world.
Content is organized by user focus and current web best practices, rather than by compendia or how USP is internally organized.

Improved the navigation functionality on the new site so visitors can now access more content directly through mega menus.
About - This is where you’ll find information about the organization, our mission, governing bodies, volunteer experts, leadership team, careers, etc.
Our Work - Content organized by user focus. Each section will typically highlight relevant standards updates, RS and publication releases, monograph donation needs, upcoming events and training, videos, etc.
Products & Services –
Previously labeled Store. Due to confusion with the actual iStore, we relabeled and organized content into three core buckets.

Most content was a direct pick up from the old site.
Events & Training - Features USP-sponsored courses, workshops, user forums, and expert committee meetings.

The new calendar offers expanded search filtering options—you can sort by topic, region, and event type. In addition, it now features information about events where USP leadership and staff may be presenting and/or exhibiting.
The New USP.org: New Content Areas

Our Impact -

- Features stories – showcases the public health impact of USP’s work. Gives a human face to what we do and why we do it.

- USP Quality Institute – builds an evidence base on the role of quality in protecting public’s health
Get Involved - Aims to engage/educate visitors about the 3 key ways they can get involved in USP’s work:

- Partner – explains how to donate monographs and reference standards
- Volunteer & Provide Input – provides details and links to our public online forums
The New USP.org: Access Reference Standards

There are multiple access points to purchasing/learning about RS on the new site:

- In various Our Work sections
  - Chemical Medicines
    - Safeguarding the quality of medications is fundamental to protecting the public’s health, especially as ingredients and products come from all over the world. Entrusted by the U.S. government, our public standards help regulators and drug manufacturers ensure that safe, high-quality medicines make their way to consumers. Our standards are unique in providing precise formulas and preparation guidelines, as well as pure reference samples for testing, so that drugs can be made consistently, every time. As new drugs enter the marketplace and new technology changes the way medicines are made, we work across the industry with experts in science and public health to keep standards current, encourage innovation and uphold confidence in healthcare.
