In this issue:

- USP continues to lead the way in biologics with new Reference Standards, education opportunities, and implementation challenges.
- Call for comments: Submit your feedback before March 31, 2019.
- New blog: "Role of Standards in Personalized Medicine" - Dr. Fouad Atouf, USP

Dr. Fouad Atouf addresses the role of standards in personalized medicine, highlighting the importance of considering global outreach. Read all about our efforts to advance the field in this newsletter.

USP's ongoing work in biologics research and development is presented, including new Reference Standards and educational opportunities for stakeholders. Dr. Atouf discusses the significance of standards and their role in meeting some of the challenges faced in the personalized medicine sector.

Biologics at USP

Read our other newsletters

Call for comments: Submit your feedback before March 31, 2019.

USP continues to lead the way in biologics with new Reference Standards, education opportunities, and implementation challenges.

- USP's Monograph and Reference Standards in global outreach. Read all about our efforts to advance the field in this newsletter.

New blog: "Role of Standards in Personalized Medicine" - Dr. Fouad Atouf, USP

Dr. Fouad Atouf addresses the role of standards in personalized medicine, highlighting the importance of considering global outreach. Read all about our efforts to advance the field in this newsletter.

USP continues to lead the way in biologics with new Reference Standards, education opportunities, and implementation challenges.

- Call for comments: Submit your feedback before March 31, 2019.
- New blog: "Role of Standards in Personalized Medicine" - Dr. Fouad Atouf, USP

Dr. Fouad Atouf addresses the role of standards in personalized medicine, highlighting the importance of considering global outreach. Read all about our efforts to advance the field in this newsletter.